

Enthusiastic Leadership, Engaged Team

The objective of this workshop is to enable a manager to identify their own leadership style, and identify how to adapt this to get the best from their people.

By the end of the session you will be able to:

- Understand the characteristics of managers and leaders
- Recognise different leadership styles
- Identify where effective leaders spend their time – and relate this personally
- Recognise individual preferred work style in the workplace
- Demonstrate the importance of effective working relationships in the workplace
- Appreciate the importance of adapting your style in the workplace
- Refresh communication techniques
- Review individual leadership and create an action plan

Format

This one day workshop uses a combination of engaging presentations, interactive discussions and exercises and focuses on action oriented outcomes. The course is reinforced through both pre and post workshop questionnaires.

Workshop Outline

- Management vs Leadership
- Understanding management styles
- Where do effective leaders spend their time
- Exploring your 'preferred' behaviours in the workplace
- Identify important relationships in the workplace
- Adapting your style to create more effective relationships
- Communication techniques to enhance workplace relationships
- Continuous improvement
- Action Planning

“Management is doing things right; leadership is doing the right things”

Tom Landry